Civil Law set at Defiance and Civil

CASSVILLE, WAYNE Co., W. VA., March 23d, 1886. To the Governor of the State of West Vir-

DEAR SIR:—After respects, I wish to all your immediate attention to some acts, as follows: Sometime last pring you commissioned me as a no-ville; and it is with extreme difficulty and under great danger and hard threats that I am getting along. My entire neighborhood is rebel with the exception of old Squire Bartram and his boys, one of whom is our high Sheriff and another Capt. David Bartram our deputy Sheriff.

I have forborne for a long time calling for measured arms thinking the rebels would quiet down; but sir, we cannot execute the civil law unless something is done. We have been beaten by mobs and shot at on the streets and dared to help ourselves. They say they can't have power, and we sha'nt have it.

Now, Governor, I suggest and absolutely insist that a company of one

Now, Governor, I suggest and absolutely insist that a company of one hundred volunteer militia be raised for our protection. The robels say if you call out the militia, they will be in the majority but we do not want more than one hundred men. Our county is mostly quiet except around Cassville. A commander and company is not necessary for the enforcement of civil law in the lower end of the county. If in your judgment you see fit to dominission and arm men, I would suggest that William Shannon be commissioned Captain. He is an honorable and upright man and knows something of both civil and military matters. Further, that David Frasher be commissioned as Lieutenant, to be stationed at Cassville. We must have from 25 to 50 men here in Cassville, or else we must get out of here. This is the landing place for all the lumber that comes down Tug river. Those big buck rebels come down in time of high water sometimes by dozens from Logan county and from Pike county, Ky., with their navies [revolvers] buckled around them, hurraining "for Jeff. Davis," cursing the Government, cursing Union men, and then we have to get out.

Sir, I frequently see then come in here who are indicted for murder in Kentucky, defying everybody. Not more than eight miles from bere, as some of the Home Guards were on their way home from being paid off a company of rebels fell on them and beat and abused them severely, calling the party "d—d abolitionists," and swore they would not submit to our laws. A few days ago they gathered in here and raised a riot with our Sheriff, and fell on him with clubs and weights and tried to kill him and his brother. His brother ran into my window out, knocked two panels out of my door and nearly killed my little

Sen-instructions and special orders per, for there will be no doubt about re-cruiting the men immediately. We have plenty of guns here which belong to the State that can be gathered up. This company should be armed with re-volvers instead of guns. I refer you to Major Brown, [Col. Gr. W. Brown, Q. M. General] the man who came here and paid the home guards. He formed some acquaintance with me when he was here, also with Shannon and Lieut. Fresher Yours, with respect.

QUESTION.—"I have heard it stated that the title of Dickens' work, 'Our Mutual Friend,' is not grammatical. I cannot see anything wrong about it. Will you please enlighten us?"

Answer.—It is not incorrect, but it is tautological. In other words, the "our" and the "mutual" express the same thing, and therefore one of the terms is unfological. In other words, the "our" and the "mutual" express the same thing, and therefore one of the terms is superfluous.

If the frames are done that a falsehood, and I am within the permission, repeat it. If the frames are gilt, or imitatiou of real gold, they may be washed with a soft spongé and soap mut be carefully rubbed with a piece of cotton moistened with alcohol, taking the precaution to remove the dust with a soft brush, or a pair of bellows, before commencing operations. Be sure which way the frames are done, as either of the above methods will most effectually destroy the gilding if the directions are reversed.

The tax on crude petroleum, it would eem, has crippled the production of oil to a very great extent, and if not Would instantly expel M'Dougall of California. His conduct on Monday was infamous. With ladies in the gallery, he used the foulest language, and it seemed for a time as if the presiding officer never would have the sense and courage to arrest him in his drunken speech. His smallest offense was calling his colleague a liar. What is the reason the Senate has not the moral courage to expel this drunken ruffian to Come and stay here a month and you will know why. You will see that while M'Dougall and Saulsbury are the only two Senators who appear in the Senate in a state of intoxication, there are others who drink so hard that they will not be comparation to previous years, the low price of oil and the present large production, are subjects which keep every in a state of intoxication, they will not be comparation to previous years, the low price of oil and the present large production, are subjects which keep every in the subject of a decreased production:

the subject of a decreased production:

"The oil business was never in a more critical condition than at present. The doubts expressed in some quarters as to the repeal of the tax, the very small amount of development going on in comparison to previous years, the low price of oil and the present large production, are subjects which keep every interest connected with oil in a condition of the most perplexing suspense. Letters are written from the Eastern Markets for opinions as to how the production is going to hold out, and letters of inquiry are constantly sent to the Eastern markets in reference to the probable demand, but both parties appear to be non-plussed. It may, however, be a reasonable supposition that, if the tax is not removed, the production of oil will be very liable to fall off, as there are so few of the wells whose average yield pays expenses. Even with large wells, which are so-called, the tax is a terrible draw-dask. We will give a samlapse of six months they desire to have their wedding made public, but are afraid of tolks gossip, and have come to the conclusion that they will get married the second time, but publicly, in order to impress a better opinion on the minds of the friends of both parties. They now put the question to me and I ask you to relieve me by answering it, viz: Howgreat a wrong is it for the same parties to get married twice?"

ANSWER—No wrong whatever, as the first marriage is the only legal one, they may go and remarry as often as the entertainment may gratify them or their friends without offending theiaw. Do you forget that at the famous public wedding gotten up in the "New England Kitchen," in the Brooklyn Acadeiny of Music, on the occasion of the Fair of the Sanitary Commission, two persons who had been runn and wife for many years were married with much year they are relabrated Brooklyn and the product of the realization of the same point of the same parties. the case with a large producing well what must it be with those which ar only producing one hundred barrel and under?

On the other hand it has been prover that when a well is first struck it gene rally produces more than at any future period of its existence, and month by month it gradually dries away until it dries up. If, therefore, there is not stimulus given to further production the wells now in existence cannot be depended on to supply the market, and froin the general appearance of the producing territory at the present moment, there is nothing to guarantee a supply equal to even what it was last year. there is nothing to guarantee a supplied and to even what it was last year. This is one reason why the Pittsbur operators are buying the oil to hold it as the changes are very much in favo of its becoming a scarce article beforest fall, when it will be most in demand.
